1. Introduction and Values

Welcome to Aadhina Organics. This handbook explains the general people policies and workplace practices that help us work consistently, fairly and safely. It should be read alongside each employee's offer letter, employment contract, role description and any local policies.

Our values

Value	What it means in practice
Integrity	Act honestly, keep commitments and raise concerns promptly.
People first	Treat colleagues, customers, suppliers and partners with respect.
Health and wellbeing	Support safe working practices and sustainable workloads.
Quality and responsibility	Take care with product quality, records and customer commitments.
Sustainability	Use resources responsibly and consider long-term impact.
Collaboration	Share information appropriately, listen and help the team succeed.

Policy principles

- Policies will be applied consistently, subject to individual circumstances and applicable law.
- Where this handbook conflicts with mandatory law, the law takes precedence.
- Where an employment contract provides a more favourable entitlement, HR will review the position and applicable law.
- Employees should ask their manager or HR if a policy is unclear.

2. Employment Types and Personnel Records

Employment arrangements may include permanent, fixed-term, part-time, probationary, temporary, contract or internship roles. The offer letter or contract will set out the applicable terms, including role, manager, pay, work location, hours, benefits and notice requirements.

HR will maintain employee records for legitimate employment and legal purposes, restrict access to authorised personnel and retain information in line with applicable data-protection and retention requirements. Employees should notify HR promptly when relevant personal or emergency-contact details change.

3. New Joinee and Onboarding Policy

A structured onboarding process helps every new employee understand the organisation, role, policies and support available.

3.1 Before the joining date

- HR confirms the offer, contract, joining date, work location, reporting manager and any pre-employment checks permitted by law.
- The manager prepares an initial work plan, introductions and any equipment or system access needed.
- The employee submits required documents through the approved secure process. Only documents necessary and lawful for the employment purpose should be collected.

3.2 First day and first week

- Welcome and introductions to the team, manager and key contacts.
- Overview of the organisation, products, values, role expectations and reporting lines.
- Set up approved email, systems, access permissions, equipment and security controls.
- Complete required induction on workplace safety, information security, data protection and relevant operational procedures.
- Agree initial objectives, training needs and regular check-in dates.

3.3 Documents and records

Depending on local law and the role, HR may request identity and right-to-work evidence, address and contact details, tax/payroll information, bank details for salary payments, qualifications, professional licences, emergency contact details and signed employment documents. Collection and verification must follow applicable privacy and employment rules.

3.4 Probation and confirmation

Where a probation period applies, its duration and terms will be stated in the employment contract. The manager should provide clear expectations, timely feedback and a documented review before the probation end date. Possible outcomes may include confirmation, an extension where lawful and contractually permitted, or termination in accordance with the contract and applicable law.

3.5 Buddy and support

A buddy or mentor may be assigned to help the employee understand team routines and find information. Employees should feel able to ask questions, raise concerns and request reasonable support.

Manager checklist
Confirm role objectives; explain key policies; agree training; check access and equipment; schedule 30/60/90-day conversations as appropriate; document feedback and actions.

4. Working Hours, Attendance and Flexible Work

Normal working hours, breaks, weekly rest, overtime rules and work location will be set out in the employment contract, local schedule or team arrangements, subject to applicable law.

Attendance and time recording

- Employees should be ready to work at the agreed start time and record working time accurately where required.
- If delayed or unable to attend, notify the manager as early as reasonably possible using the agreed channel.
- Overtime or additional hours must be approved in advance where required by policy; payment or time off will follow the contract and local law.
- Flexible or remote working must be agreed with the manager and may be subject to role, security and operational needs.

Meetings and communication

- Attend required meetings or advise the organiser promptly if unable to attend.
- Use professional, respectful language and protect confidential information during calls and meetings.
- Keep calendars and handovers sufficiently up to date to support team coordination.

5. Leave and Holiday Policy

Aadhina Organics recognises the importance of rest, family responsibilities and personal wellbeing. Leave entitlements, accrual, pay, carry-over, evidence requirements and approval rules must be configured for the relevant country and stated in the employment contract or local leave schedule.

5.1 Types of leave

Leave type	General policy approach
Annual / earned leave	Request through the approved system with reasonable notice. Approval considers team coverage and business needs. Statutory minimums and carry-over rules apply.
Public / bank holidays	Observed according to the employee's work location and applicable law. Where work is required on a holiday, the applicable compensation or time-off rules apply.
Sick leave	Notify the manager promptly, follow the sickness reporting process and provide evidence only where lawfully required.
Family-related leave	Maternity, paternity, parental, adoption, carers' and other protected leave will be handled under applicable law and local policy.
Bereavement / compassionate leave	Employees may request time away following a bereavement or serious family situation. Entitlement and pay are defined in the local schedule or contract.
Unpaid leave	May be considered by the manager and HR where appropriate, subject to business needs, contract and law.
Other statutory leave	Jury service, civic duties, disability-related leave or other protected absences will be managed in accordance with applicable law.

5.2 Requesting annual leave

- Submit requests through the approved system or to the manager before making non-refundable plans wherever possible.
- The manager will respond within a reasonable time and consider coverage, fairness and previously approved leave.
- Do not assume leave is approved until confirmation is received, except where local law provides otherwise.

• On departure, unused leave will be calculated and paid or adjusted as required by law and contract.

5. Leave and Holiday Policy (continued)

5.3 Leave administration rules

- HR will publish the local entitlement, leave year, accrual method, carry-over limit and rules for public holidays.
- Managers should plan coverage fairly and avoid unreasonable delays in deciding leave requests.
- Employees should record leave accurately and correct errors promptly.
- Leave records will be handled confidentially and retained under the organisation’s records policy.

Before publishing
Insert a jurisdiction-specific leave schedule showing annual leave days, public holidays, sick pay, family leave, notice for requests, carry-over rules and the leave-year dates. Do not use a single global entitlement for employees in different countries.

6. Sickness Absence and Wellbeing

Employees who are unwell should prioritise recovery and follow the reporting procedure below. Managers should handle health-related information sensitively and share it only with authorised people who need it.

Reporting sickness

- Notify the manager as soon as reasonably possible, ideally before the normal start time, stating the expected absence duration if known.
- Follow local requirements for self-certification, medical certificates or other evidence.
- Keep the manager updated if the expected return date changes, while sharing only information reasonably necessary for absence management.
- Before returning, discuss any temporary adjustments or support needed to work safely.

Wellbeing and adjustments

Employees may raise workload, stress, accessibility or workplace-adjustment concerns with their manager or HR. Requests will be considered fairly and confidentially, taking account of role requirements, safety, operational needs and applicable law. This policy does not replace urgent medical or emergency support.

7. Performance, Learning and Development

Managers should agree clear role objectives, explain how success will be assessed and provide timely, constructive feedback. Formal reviews may take place periodically and may cover results, behaviours, development goals and support required.

- Employees should raise blockers early and participate in agreed review conversations.
- Training may include induction, role-specific skills, safety, compliance, information security and professional development.
- Performance concerns should be communicated clearly, with reasonable opportunity and support to improve, subject to the contract and applicable law.

8. Code of Conduct and Workplace Behaviour

Everyone is expected to act professionally, lawfully and in the organisation’s best interests while at work or representing Aadhina Organics.

- Be honest in business dealings, reporting, time records and expense claims.
- Treat colleagues, customers, suppliers and visitors with courtesy and respect.
- Avoid conflicts of interest and disclose actual or potential conflicts to the appropriate manager.
- Do not misuse company property, funds, access credentials or confidential information.
- Follow product quality, hygiene, safety and operational procedures relevant to the role.
- Do not attend work impaired by alcohol, illegal drugs or any substance that makes work unsafe; apply local law and relevant safety policy.

Gifts, expenses and conflicts

Gifts, hospitality, personal interests or outside activities that could influence business decisions should be disclosed and managed under any applicable approval process. Expenses must be genuine, reasonable, supported by receipts where required and submitted within the stated deadline.

9. Equal Opportunity, Anti-Harassment and Grievance

Aadhina Organics aims to provide a workplace free from discrimination, bullying, harassment, victimisation and retaliation. Decisions about recruitment, pay, training, promotion and employment should be based on relevant criteria and made in accordance with applicable law.

Raising a concern

- Where appropriate and safe, raise the issue with your manager. If the concern involves the manager, or you are uncomfortable approaching them, contact HR or another designated senior person.
- Provide relevant facts, dates, witnesses and any supporting material where available.
- The organisation will review concerns promptly and impartially, maintain confidentiality as far as practicable, and give the people involved a fair opportunity to respond.
- Retaliation against someone who raises a concern in good faith or participates in an investigation is not acceptable.

Formal grievance process

A grievance should be submitted in writing where practicable. HR will acknowledge it, identify the appropriate reviewer, gather relevant information and communicate the outcome and any available review or appeal route. Timelines and formal rights must be adapted to local law.

10. Confidentiality, Data Protection and IT Use

- Use company systems primarily for authorised business purposes and follow security instructions.
- Protect passwords and multi-factor authentication; never share credentials or approve unexpected access requests.
- Store employee, customer, supplier and business information only in approved locations and share it on a need-to-know basis.
- Report suspected data loss, phishing, unauthorised access or accidental disclosure promptly to the designated IT/security contact.
- Do not install unauthorised software or transfer company data to personal accounts or devices without approval.

Employee personal information will be processed for legitimate employment purposes and in accordance with applicable data-protection law and the organisation’s privacy notice. Monitoring, where used, must be lawful, proportionate and appropriately communicated.

11. Resignation, Notice and Exit Process

Employees considering resignation are encouraged to discuss practical questions with their manager or HR. A resignation should be submitted in writing to the manager and HR, stating the intended last working day, subject to the applicable notice requirements.

11.1 Notice period

The required notice period is the one stated in the employment contract, subject to statutory minimums and other mandatory rules. Any agreement to shorten, waive or vary notice must be confirmed in writing by authorised management and HR. Employees should continue to perform their duties and comply with policies during notice unless otherwise agreed.

11.2 Handover and return of property

- Prepare a reasonable handover of work, open tasks, key contacts, documentation and risks.
- Return company equipment, keys, access cards, documents and other property by the agreed deadline.
- Transfer business records to approved company systems and do not retain unauthorised copies.
- Cooperate with access removal and security procedures on or before the last working day.

11.3 Exit interview and final settlement

HR may offer an exit interview to gather feedback. Final salary, approved expenses, unused leave, deductions and any other amounts will be calculated in line with applicable law and contract. Any required tax or employment documents will be issued under local rules.

11.4 Continuing obligations

Confidentiality, intellectual-property, data-protection and other valid post-employment obligations continue to apply to the extent permitted by law and the employee’s contract. The organisation will not seek to enforce a restriction that is unlawful or unenforceable.

12. Disciplinary Process

Where conduct, attendance or performance concerns arise, the organisation will seek to establish the facts and respond proportionately. Depending on the circumstances, the process may include an informal discussion, investigation, written notification of concerns, a meeting, an opportunity for the employee to respond, a decision and an appeal or review route.

Possible outcomes may include guidance, training, a formal warning or other action permitted by the contract and applicable law. Serious misconduct may require more urgent action. Any suspension pending investigation should be managed lawfully, proportionately and under the applicable procedure. Employees should be told how to raise an appeal where a formal decision is made.

Fair process
No decision should be predetermined. Keep appropriate records, protect confidentiality, consider relevant evidence and apply local statutory and contractual requirements.

13. Health, Safety and Incident Reporting

- Follow safety instructions, hygiene rules, equipment guidance and training relevant to the role.
- Report hazards, accidents, near misses, unsafe products or working conditions promptly to the designated manager.
- Do not bypass guards, safety controls or required checks. Stop and seek help if a task appears unsafe.
- Only trained and authorised employees may operate equipment or perform specialist tasks.

• Emergency procedures, first-aid contacts and evacuation routes must be communicated at each workplace.

14. Policy Administration and Employee Acknowledgement

HR is responsible for maintaining this handbook, publishing local schedules and communicating material updates. Managers are responsible for applying policies consistently and referring uncertain or sensitive matters to HR. Employees are responsible for reading the policies relevant to their work and asking questions where needed.

Exceptions

Any exception must be approved by authorised management and HR, documented in writing and remain consistent with applicable law. An exception for one situation does not automatically create an entitlement in another.

Review and updates

The handbook should be reviewed at least annually and whenever the organisation enters a new jurisdiction, changes its operating model or relevant laws change. The current approved version should be made available to employees.

Employee Acknowledgement

I acknowledge that I have received or been given access to the Aadhina Organics Employee Handbook and HR Policies. I understand that I am responsible for reading the policies relevant to my role and asking HR or my manager if I need clarification. I understand that this acknowledgement confirms receipt and does not waive any statutory rights or amend my employment contract.
